- Display Name - changeable, for seasons or notices like:
    - COMMS OPEN / CLOSED - artist or writer commissions
    - hiatus - taking a break from Twitter
    - DMs Closed - taking a break from direct messages

NAMES

- Choosing a "sizey" name shows you are a person, not a bot
- Long display names will be cut off on mobile
- Consistency! When making seasonal changes, try to keep some part of your display name or picture visible or your own friends won't recognize you.

WHY DOES IT MATTER?

- Bots are fake accounts that spread & take over quickly
  - bots are programmed to follow your followers
- They need to be blocked & reported regularly
- But how to know who's real & who's a bot?
  - username contains numbers
  - easily generated first/last names like @EdgarLammot52, display name Edgar Lammot
  - appears anonymous without a photo, banner, or bio
  - photo is a generic face or anime character
  - bio is generic, sounds like an AI without no mention of size
  - new account, following a lot, has few followers
  - "Not followed by anyone you're following"

THE LINGO

THE LINGO

- @Mention: @ followed with the name of a user will create a link to their account in your tweet and notify them about your mention.
- #: Hashtag. One or two is likely enough. #SizeTwitter is one of them.
- DM : Direct message. Private message between two users. In order to send a DM, the recipient must follow you or change settings to allow all messages.
- TL (Timeline): List of tweets from users you follow and interact with most often. This is Twitter's main screen.
- Thread: a collection of tweets from one person meant to be read together. You can reply to any tweet in the thread, but usually you want the first or last.

THE LINGO

- RT (re-tweet): RT a Tweet will share it with all your followers, unless they select "Turn off Retweets" for a specific person.
- QRT (quote re-tweet): Quote RT will share a tweet with all your followers and allows you to comment on it, but it impacts the likes/comments on the original and many artists and writers prefer you didn't QRT them
- @Mention: @ followed with the name of a user will create a link to their account in your tweet and notify them about your mention.
- #FF (Follow Friday): Each Friday, Twitter users like to share their favorite accounts with the #FF hashtag.

THE LINGO

- NSFW: Not Safe For Work. Often used to describe online posts that are mainly associated with heavy nudity, sexuality, heavy profanity and other adult topics. Also includes violence and gore.
- SFW: Safe For Work. Used to describe content that could be viewed in the presence of your boss and colleagues.
  - #sfwgt stands for Safe For Work Giant/Tiny, and connects a part of the size community that does not want to interact with sex, violence, or adult themes. IMPORTANT: MINORS MAY USE THIS TAG. Also includes #gtfluff.
- MDNI: Minors Do Not Interact. Meant to discourage people under the age of 18 from following or interacting with content.

THE LINGO

- Mute: A safety feature that lets you mute a person, word, or phrase. They can see you and what you post, but you can't see them unless you go to their account. If they reply to your tweet, you'll have the option to view it or leave it hidden.
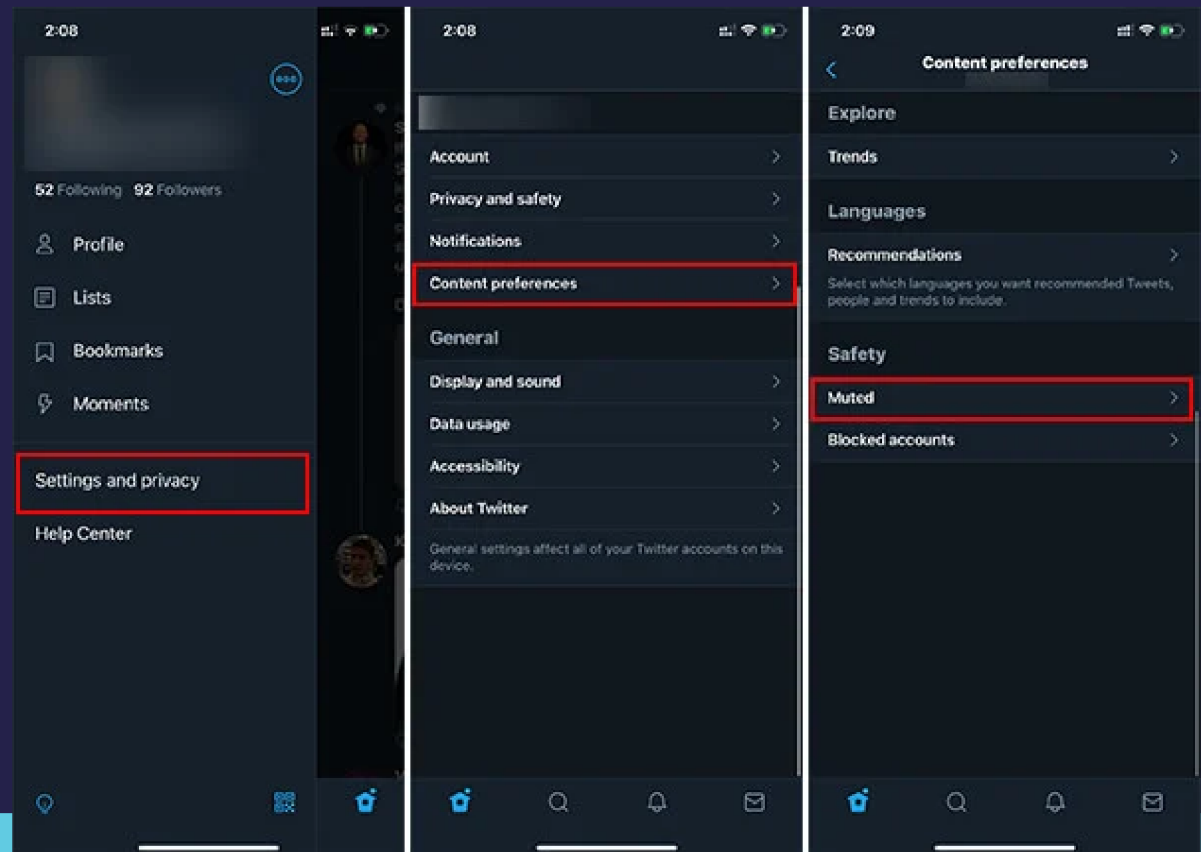

THE LINGO
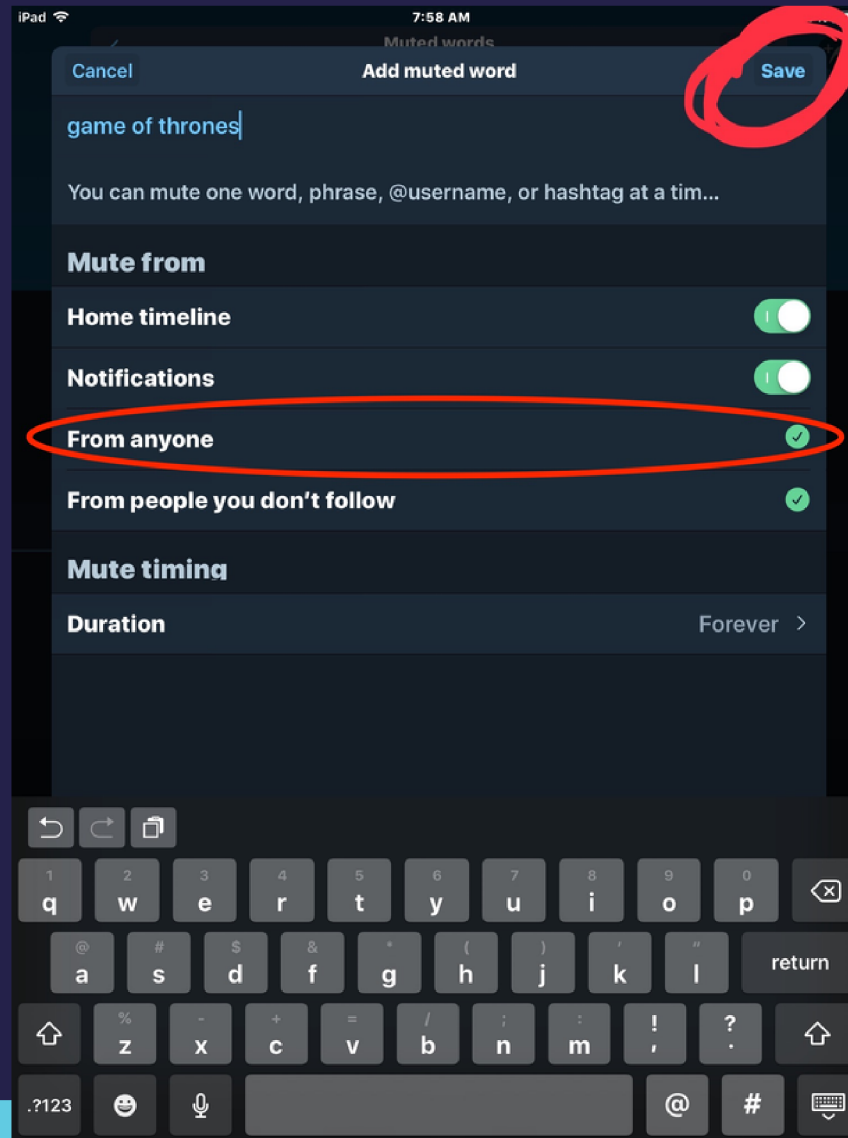

THE LINGO

- Unfollow: You will stop seeing their tweets in your timeline, unless a mutual friend interacts with their content.

- Block: When you block a person, they will not see your tweets or anything beyond your bio, and you won't see their tweets either. It won't notify them, but they will be able to tell when they try to look at your profile.

- Report: Asking Twitter to take action to remove an account that is harassing, using hate speech, threatening violence, or which is a fake account. Unfortunately can be very hit or miss. It helps to have lots of people reporting.
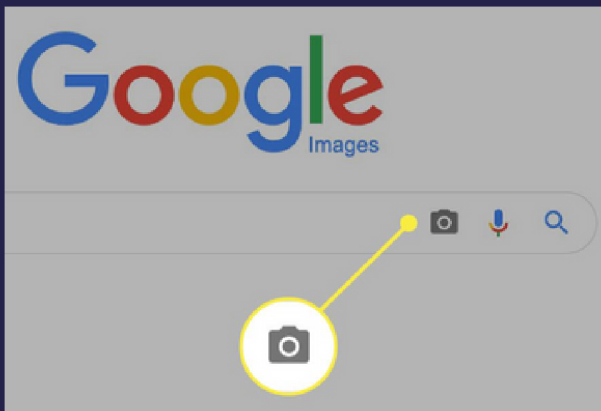

SUPPORTING ARTISTS

WHEN SHARING ART

Always credit the artist
& ask permission
whenever possible!

It can be REALLY demoralizing to a creator to see their work shared without credit.
Don't know who to credit? It's best not to share, unless you're asking for help identifying the artist.

Try Reverse Image Search on Google and TinEye to find the source.

Elle Largesse, Literal Witch ✨ @mightytinygiant · Aug 29, 2020 ···
@artist_eros saw this & thought of me bc she said, "Oh look, a room to be in when you feel big." And she's right, of course. So, so right. #SizeDysmorphia

Grateful for good people in my life right now. 💜

(Couldn't find the image source on TinEye, if you know it please reply.)

SHOW YOUR SUPPORT

- Publicly compliment what you love about their art! Likes are good, RT are great, but nothing beats a reply.
- Not only does it give a vital boost to self esteem and motivation, a reply to their tweet will help boost visibility in the algorithms and increase their chances of being seen. This is especially true within the first 20 minutes and the first 24 hours. Unless your compliment really needs to be privately sent in DMs, reply to the tweet and you'll help more people discover their work!
- Bonus points: ask them questions, tag friends you think would like it, and have a full conversation in the tweet thread---you'll help keep their visibility going all day!

FINDING YOUR PEOPLE

TWITTER ETIQUETTE

Always remember there is (usually) a human being on the other side of that tweet—a person with responsibilities, trauma, hopes, & goals you may never know about. Empathy and boundaries are important here.

Don't know people well? Try not to interrupt a convo between two people you don't know yet. Reply to the first tweet, or if many people are responding, jump in!

Get in the habit of reading bios first. This is where you see peoples' pronouns, interests, hard limits. All are tips on how to connect with them in particular!
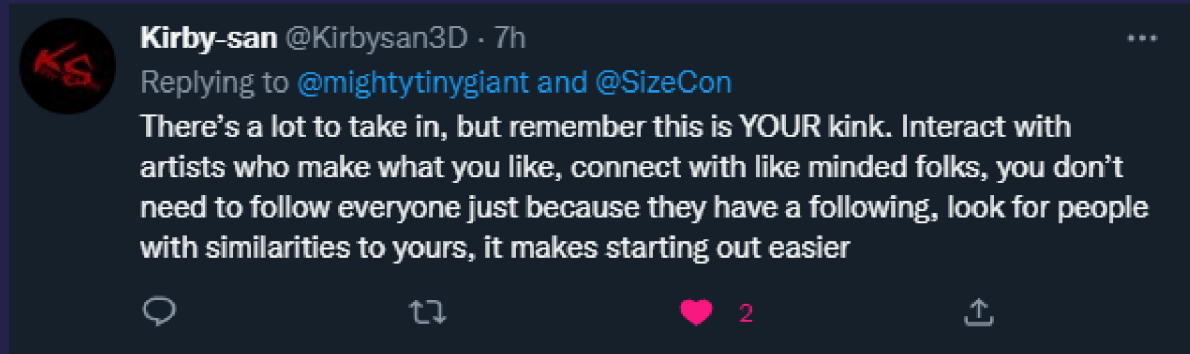

People may not always respond. Twitter is a fast, busy place. Even with good intentions people may forget, get overwhelmed, or not know what to say.

always worth repeating

ASK, DON'T ASSUME

You never know for sure what a person's size, gender, sexuality, or kinks are... until you check their bio or ask.

"Are you into [Kink A]?"
"What size are you feeling?"
"Would you be interested in..."
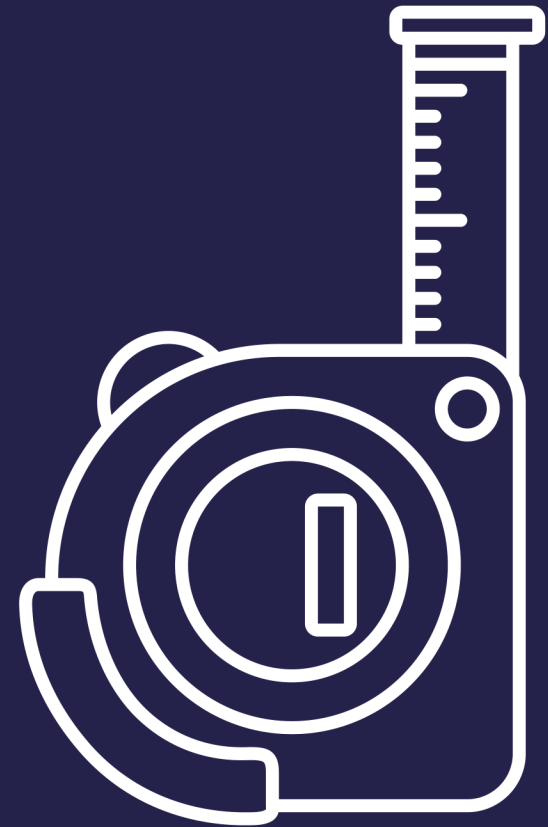

LET PEOPLE BE WHATEVER SIZE THEY FEEL.

Don't pressure tinies to grow.
Don't shrink smaller than a tiny woman to force her to play your Giantess.

Nobody is here to be your wish fulfillment machine.

(And if they are, that is a specific BDSM dynamic to negotiate with consent.)

ADVICE FOR DMS

Twitter's TL is public. If you need more privacy, ask before sending a DM to a new person. A polite tweet to this person once they've followed you will let you know whether they're OK with it or not.

Don't start with just "hi." The other person then has to work to figure out why you're DMing.

Compliment choices & concepts instead of bodies for convo starters. Ex: "I love that fantasy too!" vs "nice tits"

DMs take time & energy. Nobody owes you a response unless you've negotiated that (ex. RP or comms).

ACCESSIBILITY

ALT TEXT

A quick & easy way to give access to people who are blind or visually impaired and have kinks.

I know of at least three size kink people who have relied on screen readers. Images are inaccessible if we don't add a little alt text.
Keep it short, 1-2 sentences. What would you want to know if you couldn't see it?
BOUNDARIES

Preserve your fantasy. Never let others infringe upon yours or push their fantasy into yours. Never compromise.

You don't owe anyone art, chat, RP or time. And posting stuff doesn't entitle anyone to your attention.

Use these spaces on your terms only.

CONTENT TAGS

Tags are good because they:

- Are the only way for people online to have the chance to opt in or out of a sexual experience with fully informed consent
- Help people find what they like & mute terms they don't
- Help with accessibility
- Allow people with different hard limits to stay friends & build trust
- Help people say yes to edgeplay
- Let us decide when, where, & how long we engage with intense content
- Can reduce mutes/unfollows, esp. when trying new kinks
- Can be tempting and intriguing

TIPS FOR TAGGING

Try to use common, predictable words to help people mute!

Effective tags:

CW: pineapple, pizza toppings

#Pineapple #PizzaToppings

(pineapple on pizza)

(pineapple, pizza debate)

F/m, growth, romance, pineapple on pizza, foodgasms

Ineffective tags:

yellow fruit #PINE #APPLE pineappley

TOP 15 TAGS TO ALWAYS USE

How do you know what to tag? The highest priority tags relate to the first question I ask, "What could cause harm if someone had trauma around it?" The remaining topics are commonly taboo or are likely to cause a visceral reaction.

The next slide contains mention of topics around violence, death, sexual assault, and other "dark" themes.

If you want to minimize the screen view and turn off your audio, I will say "OK" in the chat when I have moved on from this slide.

TOP 15 TAGS TO ALWAYS USE

How do you know what to tag? The highest priority tags relate to the first question I ask, "What could cause harm if someone had trauma around it?" The remaining topics are commonly taboo or are likely to cause a visceral reaction.

1. Death
2. Violence, crush, stomp, destruction, smother, impact play
3. Blood, gore, marks, bruises, pain
4. Rape, nonconsensual/noncon, dubious consent/dubcon, unaware, sleep/somnophilia, hypnosis, mind control
5. Abuse (physical, emotional, or mental)
6. Drug, alcohol use
7. Weight play, weight gain/loss, obesity, bingeing, starvation, food denial
8. Viruses, medical conditions/disabilities, mental health
9. Vore
10. Insertion, unbirth
11. Anthro/furry, pup play, pet play
12. Transformation, objectification
13. Feet
14. Toilet play, watersports, farting, scat, diaper play
15. Incest, age play, age regression

All of these topics relate to common fantasies that can be negotiated and safely explored by consenting adults. If your body is turned on by any of these "shadow" topics, you are not alone.

If you decide to play, then how you play matters, esp. in public spaces online like Twitter, DeviantArt, and forums.
